Anglo-Arab Literatures

- Claire Galleen
  Anglo-Arab Literatures – Enmeshing Form, Subverting Assignation, Minorizing Language

- Jamana Bayeh
  Anglophone Arab or Diasporic? The Arab Novel in Australia, Britain, Canada, the United States of America

- Geoffrey Nash
  Arab Voices in Western Writing: The Politics of the Arabic Novel in English and the Anglophone Arab Novel

- Sarah Irving
  Love as a Peace Process? Arab-Jewish Love in the Anglophone Palestinian Novels of Naomi Shihab Nye and Suwar El-Yousif

- Nora PARR
  Coherence in a Context of Fragmentation: The Missing Letters in Adama Shibli’s Kalima he’ed bi-dhat al-nagdillan ‘an al-khubb and We are All Equally Far from Love

- Talita Abdel Nasser
  Arab and Latin American Literature: Mourid Barghouti, Najla Said, and Lina Mercuane in Palestine

- Sophia Brown
  Compelled to Narrate: Politics, Cairo and the Common Ground in Abdaf Souei’s Life Writing

- Irene Fernandez Ramos
  The Limits of Authenticity and the “Burden of Representation”: Palestinian Theatre on the British Stage

- Valerie Anisochenkova
  Speaking in Tongues: Arab Autobiographical Discourses of Americanization

Reviews

- Reviewed by Sathia Ben-Messahel
  Decolonizing the Landscape: Indigenous Cultures in Australia. Edited by Beate Neumeyer and Kay Schafffer

- Reviewed by Sam Coombes
  Borderless and Postcolonial Studies. Edited by Raphael Dalleo

- Reviewed by Cécile Giradet
  Combined and Uneven Developments: Towards a New Theory of World Literature. Warwick Research Collective (Shane Deckard, Nicolas Lawrence, Neil Lazarus, Graeme Mac Donald, Upamanyu Pablo Mukherjee, Stephen Shapiro, and Benita Parry)

- Reviewed by Christine Lorre-Johnston

- Reviewed by Claire Ombrové
  “With a Bear from Underground.” Alix Munro’s Dance of the Happy Shades. Edited by Corinne Bigot and Catherine Lathion

- Reviewed by Armelle Payot
  Carol Shields and the Writer-Critic. By Brenda Beckman-Long

Contributors

- 127